OVER THE GARDEN GATE

by Jo Ellen Meyers Sharp

Dahlia Happy Single Date Bulb

Frost has probably blackened or turned to mush the tops of tender bulbs, including dahlias, tuberous begonias, cannas, caladiums, pineapple lily and gladiolas. We can winter over these plants — or not.

For the less ambitious, these tender bulbs can stay in the ground, where they likely will be killed by winter temperatures.

But if you'd like to winter over the bulbs, here are a few tips:

If planted in the ground for the summer, the bulbs or corms will have to be dug, dried and stored in mesh bags, such as those potatoes or onions come in. Dig the bulbs, cut off the foliage, wash off the soil and dunk them in a solution of water and bleach (1 part bleach to 9 parts water). Allow the bulbs to dry completely with good air circulation. Baking racks work well for this task.

Once the bulbs are dry, place them in mesh bags. Or, pack them in peat moss, sand or wood chips. Store them in an area that does not freeze but is not so warm that the bulbs will sprout. Check the bulbs every few weeks. Remove and discard any that are soft or covered with mold.

For tender bulbs grown in pots during the summer, move them pot and all to the basement or other area that won't freeze or stay too warm.

Cut back the foliage. Don't water the bulbs until next spring when you move the pots and their plants to a brighter, slightly warmer location to begin growing for a new season. Divide the bulbs as needed.

Whatever methods, the most important thing is to keep the bulbs dry for winter and stored in an area where they won't freeze or get too warm.

Burrello Family Center Happenings

With the winter months just around the corner, the staff at the Burrello Family Center is busy with registration of the coaches and children for our winter basketball program. They are also decorating and getting ready for Santa and Mrs. Claus on December 8, 2007 from 10:00AM to 3:00PM. Santa Claus will be at the Garfield Conservatory and Mrs. Claus will be at the Burrello Family Center, where she will be reading and telling stories to the children, while they will be eating cookies and sipping punch. There will also be arts and crafts available. Mrs. Claus will be giving out candy canes to the children and you may also take a picture of your child with her.

In January the Center will be bouncing busy for our Jr. Basketball League. The games will start and run through the middle of March, six days a week with practices and games on Tuesday, Thursday and all day on Saturday. In February we will start taking registrations for Spring Basketball for ages 3-5, 6-9 and 10-13, and our Peewee Softball program for ages 4-8.

We will begin accepting applications for summer employment in February for Pool Manager, Head Lifeguards, Lifeguards and Cashiers, and other locations throughout Indy Parks.
